The "True Crime" genre is explored but not pushed far. But there it is. Club Film. BTW interviewed her in Australia by e-mail at the end of March.

The bi-level approach emphasizes Hooper's apparent fascination with the death of Cameron Doomadgee, published in The Monthly and internationally. Kate arrives back at school post-tryst and finishes her day of teaching, employing a Socratic method that appears throughout the book to amusing effect, yielding off-kilter discussions of topics like truth, law and death among the children, the most gifted of whom is Thomas's son, Lucien.
